South Australian Council on Intellectual Disability (SACID)

We work towards achieving a South Australian community in which people with intellectual disability are involved and accepted as equal participating members. We do this through consultation with stakeholders, advocating for an inclusive community, promoting the rights of people with intellectual disability and collaborating with likeminded organisations.

SACID is the South Australian agency of Inclusion Australia. Inclusion Australia bring together groups across Australia who are connected to people with intellectual disability and who are committed to the shared vision of inclusion in all aspects of Australian life. We make sure South Australia's voice is heard in all of the work done by Inclusion Australia.

SACID also provide an information service called SA Inclusion Point. SA Inclusion Point is for people with intellectual disability, their families, community and mainstream services, and the wider community. People with intellectual disability and their families can get easy to understand information to help them make decisions and connect with their community. We run information sessions for people with intellectual disability and their families; we have information for mainstream services to help them do a better job of including people with intellectual disability; and we answer questions from anyone in the community to help them better understand intellectual disability. We do this to help the South Australian community be inclusive of people with intellectual disability.
